Stitches in Time is a celebration of 'England's lovely wayside flowers', to quote its anonymous author. Sixty flowers – from anemones to cowslips, from red poppies to white violets – are illustrated in charming full-colour embroidered images. Accompanying each one is a description of the part it plays in English wildlife, folklore, literature, country recipes and rural remedies. Brought together in this delightful book, they recall an era when the pace of life moved to a steadier, simpler rhythm than it does today.

Both the author's manuscript and the altar cloth decorated with the embroidered flowers form part of the collection of All Saint's Brockhampton, the much-visited Arts and Crafts church close to the River Wye in Herefordshire. The proceeds from the sale of this book will go towards maintaining it as a place of worship and an attraction to visitors worldwide for generations to come.
